Target Golf

We're all familiar with the term target golf, and probably know that with our iron game it means to aim at the flag stick. But let's take a closer look at what "target golf" is in relation to our entire game. When hitting our drives, we want to make sure we pick out a target down the fairway, maybe a tree, maybe a house on the horizon. Just make sure you have a specific target even on your drives. When hitting a pitch or chip shot make sure you pick out a spot where you want the ball to land, then let it roll to the hole. That's our target (where the ball lands). When putting short putts, don't just try to hit the ball to the hole. Focus on the very center portion of the cup. In other words, zoom in with your concentration on a specific target, not just a vague area. So remember, target golf is really focused golf.
